President Benson dies at 94

LAEL PALMER
Senior Reporter

Ezra Taft Benson, leader of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints since 1985, died of a heart failure Monday at his apartment in Salt Lake City. He was 94.

Benson's emphasis on the Book of Mormon will endure long after his death, said BYU President Rex Lee. "He always remember him as a charismatic individual," said Lee. "His love for President Benson) understood and throughout his life the spirit of BYU," Hafen said.

Benson was a courageous and relevant and an important piece for the church. But most of all, he was a man of faith.

Benson focused the church on the central message of the Book of Mormon, showing us the importance of the Book of Mormon. He spoke to the problems of the church, the problems of the world, and the problems of the human condition. He has never been able to get his message across, but it does now.

Benson's authentic faith was his strength. He was a man of faith, and he was a man of love. He was a man of faith, and he was a man of love.

Benson has been a man of faith and compassion for all. He was a man of faith and compassion for all. He was a man of faith and compassion for all.

Benson became the 13th president of the Church on Nov. 10, 1985, after the death of Spencer W. Kimball. He was the second oldest man to be president of the LDS Church. He was a man of faith, and he was a man of love.

Benson's emphasis on the Book of Mormon, he counseled members to be active in the Church, read the scriptures, and maintain high standards of morality.

Leadership shifts to Pres. Hunter of the Twelve

By HARISA STAPLES and GREGORY D. SIMONSEN

Following the death of President Benson, President Howard W. Hunter and the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles assumed leadership of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

President of the Twelve, or the next prophet. This will likely happen a few days after President Hunter's funeral.

According to Church doctrine, the president is chosen by the Lord but he is also chosen by the members of the Church.

On the death of the president, thereby releasing the presidency and releasing the president's counselors, bestows on the president of the Twelve the required authority to exercise the keys they possess and assume full responsibility for governing the church, including the reorganization of the First Presidency," according to the church's constitution.

Clinton eulogizes President Benson

"It was with sadness that I learned today of the passing of Ezra Taft Benson, who served our country and his church with ceaseless dedication over a long life productively lived."

"It is no accident that one of Mr. Benson's most famous books emphasized in its words and thoughts the three values his life best represented — church, God and country. He was a leader of his church for five decades, he preached with passion for unity, solidarity and responsibility within the family, and he served ably in the Eisenhower administration as agriculture secretary."

"As we celebrate D-Day and the liberation of Europe, it is important to remember that Mr. Benson was the first representative of his church to re-enter post-war Europe, where he distributed aid and lifted the spirits of thousands of survivors."

"His friends and fellow believers remind us tonight that Ezra Taft Benson was a lifelong Scouter, a strong defender of the Constitution, the creator of the soil bank, a religious man who expanded the membership of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and someone who believed and preached the idea that families come first."

"We rejoice in his service, we remember his life, and we extend our heartfelt sympathies to his family, his church and his admirers worldwide."

dards of morality. To the women of the Church, he said, "There is no more noble work than that of a good and God-fearing mother." He counseled fathers to properly provide for their families and be worthy examples to their children.

He also warned against pride and encouraged disaffected and inactive Latter-day Saints to "come back" into full fellowship in the Church.

During his administration, he and his associates in the first Presidency issued strong statements reaffirming the Church's long-standing opposition to gambling, and in 1988 they issued a statement on Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, expressing compassion for those afflicted with the disease but re-emphasizing the Church's advocacy of chastity before marriage, total fidelity in marriage and abstinence from all homosexual behavior.

The LDS Church grew in membership from 5.9 million to 8.9 million during President Benson's administration. The Church expanded into Eastern Europe and portions of the former Soviet Union. Temples were completed in Korea, Peru, Argentina, Germany, Canada, Colorado, Nevada, Oregon and California. Construction of temples was begun in Orlando, Fla., and Bountiful, Utah. Plans were announced for others in St. Louis, Mo.; Hartford, Conn.; Preston, England; Hong Kong; Madrid, Spain; and American Fork, Utah.

During his administration the first stake in western Africa was organized in Nigeria, and missions were established in several African nations, as well as in Russia, Ukraine, Poland, Hungary, Czechoslovakia and the German Democratic Republic, now a part of the unified Germany.

President Benson encouraged Church members to "make the study of the Book of Mormon a lifetime pursuit," in his 1975 talk "The Book of Mormon is the word of God."

He advocated making the Book of Mormon the focal point of proselyting.

"(The Book of Mormon) would bring men to Christ; it would expose the enemies of Christ; it would testify that Joseph Smith was a prophet, and in a troubled world filled with uncertainty, it bore another witness of the Savior and his mission," he taught.

President Benson took credit for only part of his success.

"I work as hard as I can and do everything within my power. And I try to keep the commandments. Then I let the Lord make up the difference," he said.

President Benson was issued many awards, including the Silver Antelope, Silver Beaver, Silver Buffalo and Bronze Wolf from the American and International Scouting Association. He has been awarded four George Washington Honor Medals by the Freedoms Foundation at Valley Forge. In 1957, he was awarded the High Cross of the Order of Merit of the Italian Republic, the highest decoration the Italian government could give, for his help with solving Italy's food problems while he was secretary of agriculture.

In 1965, President Benson was inducted into the American Patriot's Hall of Fame. In 1978, he received an American Farm Bureau Federation award for distinguished and meritorious service in the interest of organized agriculture.

Pres. Hunter's life full of faith, service

By JEN GARDNER and MARCI BEEKE
Universe Staff Writers

President Howard W. Hunter of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles has served as an apostle longer than any other current member of the Twelve.

In his October 1987 General Conference address, President Hunter said, "Life — every life — has a full share of ups and downs. Indeed, we see many joys and sorrows in the world, many changed plans and new directions, many blessings that do not always look or feel like blessings, and much that humbles us and improves our patience and our faith."

His life was full of challenges.

President Hunter is probably best known to BYU students as the man who stood firm during the terrorist incident at a Church Educational System fireside Feb. 7, 1993, in the Marriott Center. Cody Judy, a self-proclaimed prophet, held a "bomb" to President Hunter's head in front of approximately 17,000 students and community members.

Judy tried to force President Hunter to read a letter that proclaimed Judy as head of the Church, but Judy was disconcerted when the audience began to sing "We Thank Thee O God for a Prophet," an LDS hymn.

After the incident, R.J. Snow, then Student Life vice president, asked President Hunter how he felt.

"Well, I'd like to give my talk," President Hunter said. He then proceeded to do just that.

Because of his willingness to share and to participate, he has become a major leading force in the Church. "Are we not wealthy if the Lord has blessed us with something we can share with others?" he asked during a general conference in 1985.

President Hunter was active in the Boy Scouts of America, becoming the second boy in Boise, Idaho, to attain the rank of Eagle.

As a young man, President Hunter played in a band on a Los Angeles radio show. He is proficient on the saxophone, clarinet, violin and drums.

President Hunter earned a law degree at Southwestern University Law School in Los Angeles. He enjoyed a career as a corporate lawyer in California and Utah. He received

Counties in Utah claim high conviction rates

SALT LAKE CITY — County attorneys in Utah say conviction rates are near or higher than the national median of public prosecutors, despite some high profile losses.

There is no standard system among Utah prosecutors' offices for calculating conviction rates, but most report high percentages of success.

The Salt Lake County Attorneys Office said its conviction rate in 1993 was 86 percent, compared to the national median of 87 percent in 1992.

Utah County claimed a 97 percent conviction rate in 1992, and did it with attorneys handling an estimated 277 cases each. Weber County's rate was lower at 60 percent.

Davis County prosecutors said they achieve a 97 percent conviction rate by plea bargaining nearly all of their cases.

Almost all of Salt Lake County convictions came from guilty pleas and plea-bargain agreements. Only one out of 100 convictions resulted from a case going to trial.

Several cases have generated embarrassing publicity for the Salt Lake County Attorney's Office. Yet Utah's largest attorney's office points to its successes when reminded.

Emeritus General Authority to be buried today

Funeral services for Elder Sterling W. Sill, emeritus General Authority of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, will be conducted at noon today in the Bonneville Stake Center, 1535 E. Bonneview Dr. (1020 South), Salt Lake City.

Elder Sill, who served as an assistant to the Council of the Twelve and later as a member of the First Quorum of the Seventy, died Wednesday of natural causes at the age of 91.

Friends may call Monday from 6 to 8 p.m. at Larkin Mortuary, 260 E. South Temple, and Tuesday, 10 to 11:45 a.m., at the stake center.

Burial will be in the Kaysville City Cemetery.

South Koreans fear a North Korean exodus

SEOUL, South Korea — With haggard faces and mismatched clothes, the family of North Korean defectors looked dazed and vulnerable, ill-equipped for life in a strange new world.

Many South Koreans watching the Yeh family's televised arrival earlier this month felt a rush of pity — and a stirring of dread.

For now, the prosperous South can easily absorb the few who manage to escape the Communist North. So far this year, 21 have made it out.

But each new defector is a reminder of the crushing burden the South will bear if there's a mass exodus from the North — or if the Koreans reunite.

The capitalist South, with a population of 43 million, is bustling, successful, a bit self-absorbed.

The Stalinist North, with 22 million people, is a giant Cold War museum piece — backward, isolated and impoverished.

Citizen fed up with graffiti, paints over it

SALT LAKE CITY — One man has become so disgusted with graffiti he has devoted his spare time to erasing the pollution painted by disrespectful juvenile delinquents.

Jon Beesley jogged around the Scott Avenue Park in Salt Lake County every day because the area was clean and safe.

But on a frigid October morning last year, he turned a corner and saw gang graffiti splashed on a brick wall.

"It really gave me a sick feeling," the 28-year-old Salt Lake County man said. Angered, the laboratory-supplies salesman called Salt Lake County officials to clean it up. He was told: "We'll get to it as soon as we can."

"That 'soon-as-we-can' took about a month," he remembered.

This was the beginning of Beesley's personal war against gangs with spray paint.

He now spends four or five days a week driving around in his compact car with 5-gallon buckets of gray, white, green and maize paint.

On his way home from work, he drives around for about 15 minutes and looks for new graffiti. He either will paint over it immediately or make a note to cover it the next morning. If it's a privately owned building, he asks permission first. No one ever has turned him away.

Proposed interchange may ease traffic congestion

By LANNA J. CARTER
Universe Staff Writer

Funding for the I-15/University Avenue Interchange at 1860 South in Provo is awaiting the go-ahead by the U.S. House of Representatives, after receiving approval from the Committee on Public Works and Transportation.

Rep. Bill Orton, D-Utah, and Provo City Mayor George Stewart testified before the committee on March 15 to appropriate $3 million to the $28 million project.

The proposed project will remove the existing structures and bridges so another lane can be created on the east side.

The proposed improvement will extend 1860 South to west of I-15 and construct east side ramps and a north-bound exit from the highway.

The proposal also plans to construct a University Avenue extension and flyover southbound ramp and construct 1860 South to a new southbound I-15 ramp.

"The current configuration of the interchange at I-15 and University Avenue is no longer capable of handling the current flow of traffic that uses the interchange on a daily basis," Orton said.

Currently, 50,000 cars travel through the interchange each day.

This number is expected to rise to 70,000 to 80,000 within the next 10 years, said Nick Jones, Provo City engineer.

The city monitors the roads according to the level of service from A to F, F being total gridlock.

Currently, the level of service in the area of the interchange is E.

In the past 10 years, Novell, NuSkin and several other major businesses have moved to southern Provo near the East Bay Business Park, creating over 7,000 new jobs.

Also, major computer software companies, such as Novell, have established their corporate headquarters in Provo.

"This has caused an unprecedented rate of economic growth, which has created an urgent need for transportation improvements in the Provo-Orem area," Stewart said in his opening remarks before the committee.

Novell, a computer company, began 10 years ago with a staff of 1,200. By the end of the decade, they plan to add 2,800 more employees.

Other businesses plan to expand as well, to increase job growth in the area by 60 percent, according to Stewart's proposal.

In his testimony before the committee, Orton said, "Novell does not feel they can make plans to expand their physical plant and number of employees until they receive a firm commitment of enhanced access to and from Interstate 15."

"We end up with all the southbound traffic going on that ramp onto University Avenue. They all merge on University and many are trying to turn right. We are getting a really congested mess because there is so much traffic coming from the south that the traffic from the north can't turn," Jones said.

Novell has threatened to relocate their headquarters to an area with better freeway circulation, unless access can be improved.

"The prospect of losing Novell and the thousands of accompanying jobs would be absolutely devastating to the city of Provo, Utah County and the entire state of Utah," Orton said.

According to Orton's proposal, the interchange improvement project will help Provo improve air quality.

The 1990 Clean Air Act dictates that the city can only have nine parts per million of carbon-monoxide in the air at any given time.

Last winter, the city reported three or four violations.

"There are too many cars in the city," Jones said.

The completed project will alleviate problems with the violations.

The proposal will go to the House in late June.

If it is approved by the House, construction should begin in 1995.

Breyer's record concerns media

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Supreme Court nominee Stephen Breyer has taken the government's side in enough federal Freedom of Information Act cases to worry some First Amendment advocates.

"I can't say that I see veiled hostility here ... but a First Amendment champion? I don't think so," said Jane Kirtley of the Reporters' Committee for Freedom of the Press.

Some media advocates said they hoped President Clinton would select someone more clearly sympathetic to the press in First Amendment cases.

"One hopes for ringing free-speech declarations from a nominee coming from a Democratic president, and that's lacking," Kirtley said.

Last year, Kirtley was among those who rated Clinton's first high court appointee, Ruth Bader Ginsburg, as a consistent supporter of free speech and access to government records. This year, the reaction of media experts is more muted.

Chicago media attorney Richard O'Brien said he expects Breyer to be "roughly the equivalent" of the justice he would replace, Harry A. Blackmun.

Blackmun's own record on First Amendment issues was spotty — he dissented from the 1971 ruling that allowed publication of the Pentagon Papers — but in recent years he was viewed as generally supportive of media interests.

Breyer joined a 1992 ruling that voided a libel suit against the Boston Globe over a theater column that said ads for a production of "Phantom of the Opera" appeared to be drawing too heavily on the reputation of a more popular production by Andrew Lloyd Webber.

The column expressed an opinion, not a factual assertion of dishonesty, the court said.

But Kirtley and O'Brien said they believe Breyer has gone too far to look out for government interests in court fights over news organizations' attempts to gain access to information under the Freedom of Information Act.

Breyer, for instance, wrote a majority opinion in 1989 that let the FBI refuse to disclose information provided by a confidential source, even after the source testified in a public trial.

In a case testing the right of free expression, Breyer wrote a 1984 ruling that said the government cannot require people to undergo a "loyalty check" to work for the World Health Organization.

The requirement violated the right to free speech, he wrote, adding that it might cause people to "avoid perfectly legitimate speech" to get a job.

Rwandan rebels take strategic army barracks near Gitarama

Associated Press

NAIROBI, Kenya — Rebels cut off the last avenue of retreat Monday for government troops caught in Rwanda's capital Kigali, and claimed to have overrun a vital army barracks near the interim government's stronghold.

The reports of rebel success came as the insurgents and the army began U.N.-mediated cease-fire talks.

After an opening session of more than five hours, U.N. spokesman Abdul Kabia said the sides agreed to meet again Thursday.

In Kigali, Kabia said the rebels raised serious concerns about continuing ethnic massacres, radio broadcasts inciting killing and alleged government interference with U.N. efforts to evacuate displaced people in the capital.

About 200,000 people have been killed and an estimated 2 million displaced since Rwanda's ethnic blood-letting began after its president was killed in a mysterious plane crash April 6.

Most of the dead were minority Tutsi and Hutu opponents of the government. They were killed by the presidential guard, some military units and civilian gangs organized by extremist Hutu politicians.

The massacres shattered a cease-fire the Hutu-dominated government and the Tutsi-led rebel Rwandan Patriotic Front signed in Tanzania last August.

There are now fears that killing could increase in areas threatened by the rebels. The government holds western Rwanda and areas in the south that had large Tutsi populations.

The rebels hold areas in the north and east of Kigali.

Rwanda's interim government retreated to Gitarama, about 25 miles southwest of Kigali, ahead of a rebel advance into Kigali last month.

Rebel radio, monitored by the British Broadcasting Corp., claimed Monday the interim government was "on the run" from Gitarama and the rebels had taken the Nyanza barracks south of Gitarama.

Rwanda's army chief of staff, Maj. Gen. Augustin Bizimungu, denied during the cease-fire talks in Kigali that the government had fled Gitarama.

A U.N. source said, on condition of anonymity, U.N. observers in Gitarama could not be reached to confirm whether the interim government was fleeing.

However, the source said it appeared the rebels had taken the barracks at Nyanza, 13 miles south of Gitarama on the road south to neighboring Burundi.

Government troops had rushed reinforcements to areas surrounding Gitarama to defend the interim government.

The U.N. source said the fall of Nyanza would be seen as a major blow to the army's ability to defend the city.

Rebels reportedly have been advancing on Gitarama from the east and the south.

An Associated Press photographer who was in Gitarama on Thursday saw government workers stacking boxes of files, equipment and luggage outside the door of the government buildings.

Tony Burgener, a spokesman for the International Committee of the Red Cross in Geneva, said more than 500,000 displaced people are now stranded in the Gitarama area without food and drinking water.

He said the rebel advance had cut off the main supply route from the south and that the plight of the displaced people is unclear if Gitarama falls. He said the refugees have no other place to go.

Most of the fighting in Kigali was concentrated around Gadhafi Corner, an intersection on the west side that controls access to the highway to Gitarama.

A U.N. source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the insurgents captured the intersection overnight and cut off the army's last avenue of retreat from the capital.

Nature's Herbs opens new facility

By KARI S. ALLEN
Universe Staff Writer

Nature's Herbs presented its new 50,000 square foot facility in American Fork during a VIP luncheon and tour last week.

The facility, which encompasses offices, laboratories, pharmaceutical processing and warehouse distribution centers, conserves 42 percent more energy than required by the current U.S. Model Energy Code by using natural light and a night ventilation system.

The system uses naturally cooled air to cool the building. The energy that is saved per year is enough to power 118 homes.

Nearly every room in the facility has access to natural light.

Stephen L. Welling, president of Nature's Herbs said, "Our biggest asset is our employees. There are three indicators to happy workers. One is access to natural light, another is fresh air and the last is a good chair. We have tried to incorporate all these in our building."

The warehouse contains a high-base storage shelving configuration and a 14 inch thick floor, which both maintain "severe earthquake tolerance" in the building, Welling said.

The cracks in the floor that run up and down the rows of storage shelving actually contain sophisticated wiring to guide the computerized 13-ton forklift.

Near the end of the rows are peculiar spherical indentations in the ground.

"Those are actually sensors to automatically cause the forklift to brake," Welling said.

Without these guides, the truck could cause internal damage to the shelving and to the walls of the warehouse, he said.

The encapsulation section of the building contains two automated machines that are capable of producing half a million capsules per shift per machine.

Nature's Herbs was founded in 1969. Five years ago, Twin Laboratories Inc., the largest health food supplement manufacturer in the world, acquired the Utah-based company. Today, Nature's Herbs employs 75 people.

Jean Blechman, executive vice president and co-founder of TwinLab said, "This is a new chapter of our success story. It's a far cry from our garage in Freeport, New York where my husband [David Blechman] had a dream ..."

David Blechman, president and CEO of TwinLab, said he was optimistic about the future of Nature's Herbs.

David and Jean have two sets of twins, hence the name TwinLab. Their five sons are actively involved in the company.

UVRMC helps raise money to benefit lung association

By ERIC D. SIMONSEN
Universe Staff Writer

"Hot-Lips," Pierce, Klinger and several other M*A*S*H character impersonators helped to raise money for the American Lung Association at Utah Valley Regional Medical Center Thursday.

The impersonators are medical center employees who volunteered to help with the fund-raiser.

"We raised between $4 thousand and $5 thousand dollars," said Craig Cutright, field representative for the American Lung Association of Utah. "Many of the donations were pledges, so we won't have an exact amount of how much we raised until all of the pledge cards come back."

The event was not only to raise funds for the ALA, but also as a public awareness event.

"The ALA is not as well known as some of the other nonprofit agencies in the state, even though it is the oldest," Cutright said. "We wanted to provide the community with information about what the ALA does for the community."

The purpose of the ALA is to educate people on the issues pertaining to clean-air and respiratory problems. They work with local and national governments to change legislation and pass laws to create cleaner air-quality standards.

Some of the money raised will go to a local organization called the Better Breather's Club. The club helps 40 to 50 people in Utah County who have chronic lung disease cope with their problem and learn to live better lives.

"The ALA has been influential in many local legislative measures concerning air quality in Utah County," Cutright said. "We have also been involved in education in the schools locally, teaching children and teachers about asthma and potential risks associated with it."

Missing donations prompt probe of Clinton's funds

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Bill Clinton's gubernatorial campaign filed a May 1986 report detailing its past year activities, but it provided only a partial disclosure of contributions from a savings and loan fund-raiser that is now being investigated by the Whitewater prosecutor.

Missing from the 1986 campaign report — the only one on the public record detailing Clinton's fund-raiser — is any mention of four donations totaling $12,000.

Federal savings and loan investigators have alleged in a criminal referral that those donations — most in the form of cashier's checks — were diverted illegally from an S&L owned by Clinton's Whitewater business partner, James McDougal.

The existence of the May 1986 report has not been reported since the Whitewater affair began in 1992. The fact that Clinton's campaign appears to have reported some donations from the controversial fund-raiser and not others is also new.

The Associated Press reported Monday that investigators alleged in a criminal referral last year that McDougal used a complex loan transaction at Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan to divert money to the campaign.

The referral, now in the hands of Whitewater special prosecutor Robert Fiske, named McDougal, the Clinton campaign fund and Charles Peacock III, an Arkansas businessman who received the loan, as suspects. All three have denied wrongdoing.

Betsy Wright, who served both as Clinton's gubernatorial chief of staff and campaign manager, said the failure to list those donations is easily explained: Those that didn't appear on the 1986 report were used to retire 1984 debts.

Any donations collected for 1984 should have been itemized on separate reports — none of which exist on the public record.

Wright emphatically stated that the campaign had no reason to hide any contributions because it believed all were legal.

At least two of the people listed on the cashier's checks as donating $3,000 each to Clinton — former Sen. J. William Fulbright and college student Ken Peacock — have said they did not give the money attributed to them and did not attend the fund-raiser.

The fund-raiser was hosted by McDougal on April 4, 1985, in Madison S&L's lobby. It was designed to help pay off a $50,000 loan that Clinton has said he took out in the final week of his successful 1984 re-election campaign.

The May 1986 campaign report shows that at least $8,000 of the donations raised that day did not go to retire the 1984 loan, but instead went to provide early money for Clinton's 1986 re-election bid.

At least an additional $14,000 in donations from the fund-raiser were left off the report.

Wright said that shortly after the fund-raiser, which appears to have taken in about $25,000, the campaign received an additional $5,000 to $6,000 in donations that McDougal helped raise. Those donations also did not appear on the 1986 report.
